Far more than an idyllic destination, Comporta embodies a serene way of life. It's a leisurely stroll through cobbled squares where time seems to stand still, passing by sun-bleached fishermen's houses adorned with blue shutters. It's the sight of elegant storks nesting atop rustic chimneys, their silhouettes etched against the endless blue sky. It's the gentle rustle of a breeze across fragrant rice fields, where the land meets the sea in perfect harmony.

Comporta is warm sand beneath your feet, the tang of salt in the air, and the distant echo of waves crashing near the surf shacks that dot the coastline. It's the whisper of wind through the Pinheirinho pines, where home and nature blend seamlessly together as one.

welcome to Pinheirinho

pinheirinho: little pine tree
pi · nhei · ri · nhu

The name Pinheirinho, which translates to “little pine tree,” reflects a deep connection to the forest, where the pines stand as guardians, ensuring that each residence is discreetly tucked away in its own natural sanctuary, offering peace and privacy throughout the day.

As the summer sun bakes the landscape, the noble pines mature and release their cones. Skilled hands then gather these cones, carefully selecting those that have begun to open, revealing their prized seeds inside. The cones are left to dry in the warmth, allowing the treasures within to ripen.

Once dried, the cones are gently cracked open, and the pine nuts are delicately extracted, each one a small yet precious gift from the forest. This labour of love transforms the raw bounty of nature into the rich, buttery kernels that may soon grace your table.
